1.1 Analysis of Imagery

- Natural Imagery: Oberon describes Titania's resting place using rich and delicate natural imagery. Words like "wild thyme," "oxlips," "violet," and "musk-roses" create a harmless and beautiful surrounding.
- Sensoring: To describe the resting place Oberon not only uses Visual markers, but also other sensorign Impressions, like smell "sweet musk-roses." or taste.

In Act II, Scene 1 of A Midsummer Night's Dream, lines 248-258, Oberon delivers a speech that serves a dual purpose: it both describes Titania's resting place and outlines his intention to enchant her. In this speech Shakespeare heavily relies on using imagery, contrast to deepen the audience's understanding of characters and themes in the play. Oberon's language and imagery is also used to setting up a twist that shifts the tone from peaceful to manipulative and dark.

The speech begins with a detailed description of Titania's resting place in the woods. This speech evokes an image of a idyllic, safe, and almost magical location.

In order to achieve that, Oberon uses a lot of nature connected words and points of all the flowers surrounding the place like "violet", "woodbine", "musk-roses" or "eglantine". Flowers represent the joy of life and the beauty of nature. Given that they surround the place amplified the bond with nature.

Also, Oberon creates an image of safety and comfort while talking about Titianas resting place. For an example that Titiana is lulled in flowers (l. 254) within her over-canopied bank (l. 249-251). This supports the twist between the evil and the comforting place in his speech.

In contrast to the beautiful nature mentioned, Oberon still has an evil plan going on. For an instance he wants to use the magical flower to give Titania hateful and torturing imaginations (l. 258). This causes a contrast between how Oberon illustrates Titianas lovely and cute living space which makes her feel safe and secure while still continueing his evil plan to make her fall in love with a forest animal.

The Twist: starts with the snake¹

¹ Snakes are venemous, so evil

1. A snake that is throwing of her skin, is changeing. This also stands for the twist and the change of tone in the text
2. The snake stands for oberon, planing behind titanias back
